

2024 Page Annual Conference

Farnaz Khadem
Vice President for University
Communications, Stanford
University

Farnaz Khadem is Vice President for University Communications at Stanford University. As Stanford's senior communications official, she is responsible for directing the university's strategic communications activities and overseeing all centrally-managed internal and external communications and public relations activities. Prior to joining Stanford, Farnaz served as Chief Communications Officer at the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), where she was responsible for the university's Office of Strategic Communications. Previously, Farnaz served as Director of Communications at SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory; Director of Corporate Communications at Life Technologies, a global biotechnology company; and Assistant Director of Media Relations at University of California, Irvine. She has extensive international experience, having worked as the head of communications for the World Anti-Doping Agency in Montreal, Canada, and the Vaccine Fund, a Bill & Melinda Gates-funded organization based in Lyon, France. She has also served as a Foreign Service officer in the U.S. Diplomatic Corps, with postings in Tel Aviv, Israel and Rome, Italy. Farnaz holds Bachelor and Master of Science degrees in journalism from Northwestern University. She speaks Farsi, French and Italian.