Monica Batchelder
Chief Sustainability Officer,
Hewlett Packard Enterprise

Monica directs a global team focused on guiding HPE's enterprise-wide sustainable business strategy. She collaborates with senior executives and the board to unify a diverse group of internal stakeholders behind a comprehensive strategy designed to maximize the company's competitive advantage and ensure the long-term sustainability of the business. During her tenure as Chief Sustainability Officer (CSO), HPE has brought to market comprehensive sustainable IT offerings, strengthened accountability through ESG-linked compensation, and held industry-leading scores across numerous top-tier ESG ratings. Monica also serves as Executive Director and board member of the HPE Foundation, driving social impact in areas such as human rights, climate change, and healthcare through the application of HPE technology. Prior to her appointment as CSO, Monica held several roles within HPE's sustainability organization and, previously, built sustainability strategies and collective impact programs as a consultant in Sydney, Australia. Monica earned her MA in Environmental Science and Law from the University of Sydney and her BA from Boston College.
