

2026 Page Spring Seminar

Cass Cliatt
Senior Vice President for Communications,
Brown University

As Brown's Senior Vice President for Communications, Cass Cliatt is a national higher education leader in issues management, crisis communications strategies, and advancing innovative initiatives for institutional positioning and reputation elevation. Reporting directly to Brown's president, Ms. Cliatt conceives and evaluates comprehensive approaches to engage broad constituencies. She develops policies that serve as a national model and trains leaders for high-profile public engagements, including news media opportunities, Congressional testimony, and public engagement with state and national agencies. A 20-year veteran of higher ed communications, Ms. Cliatt previously served in similar leadership roles at Franklin & Marshall College and Princeton University.